FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

Armed Forces Medical Policy Council

BY DR. W. RANDOLPH LOVELACE, II
Chairman

THE Armed Forces Medical Policy Council, established on 2 January 1951, has completed its first year. This is the agency to which the Secretary of Defense has given the responsibility of providing basic policies, plans, and programs in the medical and health fields. It furnishes guidance to Department of Defense agencies and enables the military departments to prepare and execute detailed policies, plans and programs.

Dr. Lovelace

The first step toward the establishment of such an office followed the passage of the National Security Act in 1947. This Act created the National Military Establishment, later renamed the Department of Defense, and assigned to the Secretary of Defense the responsibility of unifying the activities of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

In 1948 Secretary of Defense Forrestal formed a Committee on Medical and Hospital Services. At his request, this Committee made an exhaustive study of "all questions of common interest to the three medical services with a view to obtaining in the immediate future the maximum degree of coordination, efficiency and economy in the operation of the three medical services." This Committee, which was composed of the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy and the Air Surgeon, has as its chairman Dr. Paul R. Hawley, a retired Major General of the U. S. Army, and was informally known as the "Hawley Board." This Committee submitted its final recommendations in July 1949.

Meanwhile, in the fall of 1948, Secretary Forrestal created a joint civilian-military committee—the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee—to advise him on continuing questions which "affected the Armed Services as a whole in the fields of medicine and its allied professions." This Committee, whose chairman was Mr. Charles P. Cooper of New York City, was known as the "Cooper Committee."

Upon the Committee's recommendations, in May 1949, Secretary of Defense Johnson established a Medical Services Division (later called the Office of Medical Services) as part of his office, with

Plans for Marine Corps Told by Gen. Shepherd

In his first press conference since assuming office as Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Lemuel C. Shepherd revealed that the Corps is laying plans for the development of a Third Air Wing.

Earlier in the week, Marine Corps Headquarters announced that the Third Marine Brigade at Camp Pendleton, Calif., has been redesignated as the Third Marine Division. Asked about the formation of a third air wing to operate in conjunction with the division, General Shepherd replied that such plans are now under consideration. He did not divulge any details, saying only that the proposal "is still in the planning stage."

The Commandant also confirmed reports that part of the Third Division will be dispatched to Hawaii (JOURNAL 15 Dec.) and that Maj. Gen. Gerald C.

House Votes on Pay 15 Jan.; Senate Ready

The bill to increase service pay will come to a vote in the House of Representatives on 15 Jan., under present plans.

Representatives Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, apparently not being assured of consideration of the pay bill by the Rules Committee, went directly to the Speaker of the House, Representative Rayburn.

After discussing the pressing need for a Service pay increase, Mr. Rayburn agreed to let the bill come up on the floor for a vote on 21 Jan. Subsequently, however, when it worked out that the House had uncommitted time early next week, Representative McCormack, majority leader, asked and was given unanimous consent to move for suspension of the rules on Tuesday, 15 Jan., for the purpose of bringing up the pay bill.

This latter move was made with the consent of Representative Martin, minority leader of the House.

Under the procedure the House must first vote to suspend the rules in order to take up the pay bill. Then 20 minutes will be allowed for discussion on each side, followed by the consideration of the pay bill with five minutes permitted on each amendment.

In light of the agreement between the leaders of both parties there is every likelihood that the measure will be passed by a fair majority.

When the agreement had first been reached to take the bill up on 21 Jan., the Senate Armed Services Committee had stated that it would begin committee consideration of the measure at that time in order to get it to the floor of the Senate as soon as possible.

However, when the House agreed to act on 15 Jan., Senator Russell (D-Ga.), chairman of the Senate Committee, told THE JOURNAL that he would call his committee together on Monday, 14 Jan., and ask them to decide then whether to take up the pay bill or UMT bill first. At any rate, he did not think it would take long to get action on it in the Senate.

Meanwhile, Representative Sutton (D-Tenn.) reported that he conferred with the House Committee on its failure to make the pay bill retroactive to 1 July 1951, as was done in the case of civilian pay. He reports that the committee was convinced that it would cost too much, that it would not be supported in the House, and that it would be difficult of administration. Mr. Sutton was informed that the cost of administration would be about 50 per cent of the actual total to be paid out in retroactive pay.

Therefore, Mr. Sutton served notice that he will introduce an amendment on the floor to make the amount of pay increase 12 per cent instead of 10 per cent.

More MIG's Active, Red Airmen Bolder

Important ground activity in Korea this week was largely limited to a local see-saw battle between elements of the 1st South Korean Division and Chinese Communists near the western end of the line. This fierce struggle for possession of commanding hill positions west of Korangpo-ri has been in progress intermittently since 28 Dec., with the disputed ground changing hands several times.

Elsewhere land engagements have consisted of relatively minor patrol clashes and small probing attacks on outposts, with no significant changes in positions. There were no indications on either side of preparations for early resumption of full-scale operations.

In the air there were several sharp encounters early in the week in which the Reds lost at least 7 MIG-15 jet planes, with 13 others damaged. Hundreds of enemy aircraft were sighted almost every day, and on several occasions the Red airmen showed increased aggressiveness and a willingness to close in combat, which has not often been characteristic of enemy flyers in North Korea.

Naval Attacks

Allied Naval surface vessels and carrier-based planes continued to hammer at Red shore installations on both coasts, and at lines of communications and transportation facilities throughout enemy territory. Although there are indications that the Reds have substantially reinforced their troops in Korea during the lull in the fighting, it is apparent that the Allied interdiction program carried out by land and carrier planes has made it very difficult for the enemy to provide the logistic support which would be essential to resumption of Red offensive operations on a major scale.

In the battle west of Korangpo-ri this week, elements of the Republic of Korea 1st Division attacked and captured two important objectives previously lost to the Reds. One of these positions was taken by Allied troops, supported by artillery, after a 50-minute engagement, and the other in a short, fierce fight, lasting only ten minutes.

However, two enemy battalions, supported by tanks or self-propelled guns, recaptured the first position in a one-hour and 20-minute engagement, and two additional Red battalions retook the second position in an hour and a half battle. More than 1,000 enemy soldiers are estimated to have been killed in these fights.

A United Nations raiding patrol northwest of Yonchon ran into a heavy volume of small arms and automatic weapons fire and hand grenades. Two sharp fights, lasting several hours, occurred at an enemy hill position, after which the Allied patrol withdrew.

Heartbreak Ridge

In the Mundong-ni Valley, west of Heartbreak Ridge, an Allied unit was forced back from an advance position by a brief enemy attack. Later, a United Nations counterattack reoccupied the position, encountering only light enemy resistance.

Light to moderate engagements with enemy units of platoon strength were reported on the central front throughout the week. Except for brief patrol actions northwest of the Punch Bowl there was only light contact along the eastern front, where Naval gunfire kept enemy units along the coast close to their bunkers. For the most part, activity of the Allied ground troops was restricted to patrolling, maintaining and strengthening their positions.

Allied Naval patrol and blockading surface vessels along both Korean coasts, and carrier-based planes combined to destroy enemy installations and transportation lines. These attacks tightened the land and sea blockade, which has for its purpose the isolation of the battle area to limit drastically the enemy capability of reinforcing and supplying Red forces at the front.

The U. S. Heavy Cruiser Rochester and the Destroyer Collett fired hundreds of rounds of 5-inch shells at observation posts, gun positions, and bunkers on Red front lines near Kosong, on the eastern extremity of the land battle line. In the same area the U. S. Destroyer DeHaven destroyed enemy bunkers facing Allied troops at the front line near the east coast.

In the Wonsan region, the U. S. Destroyer Mansfield destroyed several buildings with 5-inch gunfire, causing secondary explosions. While on patrol along the east coast, the U. S. Destroyer Mackenzie fired at targets of opportunity, including villages, rail terminals, and enemy installations.

Enemy shore and coastal traffic in the Songjin area on the east coast was stopped by accurate gunfire from the U. S. Destroyer Swenson and the Destroyer-Minesweeper Endicott. Other Allied patrol and blockade vessels along the east coast reported routine harassment and interdiction of shore targets.

Destroyer Shells Troops

On the west coast, the U. S. Destroyer Taussig bombarded Red troops southwest of Chinnampo with unobserved results, while the New Zealand Patrol Frigate Hawea maneuvered in the lower reaches of the Han River to shell Red troops on the northern shore.

Allied Navy and Marine carrier-based planes killed hundreds of Red soldiers, destroyed numerous buildings, knocked out a number of bridges, and cut railway tracks in sweeping raids over North Korea during the week.

Fighters and attack bombers from the U. S. Carriers Essex and Valley Forge made interdiction strikes far behind enemy lines. In the Tanchon area, Valley Forge pilots broke spans of newly repaired bridges which had been disabled by previous air attacks. Essex flyers destroyed a number of other bridges along the east-west supply route in the vicinity of Wonsan.

Jet pilots from the Valley Forge machine-gunned a large enemy troop concentration, killing an estimated 161 Red soldiers. Roadbeds and rails were battered over Northeast Korea, where 106 rail cuts were reported. North of Hungnam, Banshee jet pilots from the Essex reported destruction of 10 buildings suspected of sheltering Red supply trucks.

During the first three days of this week Fifth Air Force fighters shot down 7 enemy MIG jet planes in Northwest Korea and damaged 13 others. No losses of Allied planes in air encounters were announced.

Air Combat Rough

The principal air battle occurred on Sunday, 6 Jan., when American F-86 Sabre Jets closed with large formations of enemy jet aircraft and shot down five and damaged 10 Russian-made MIGs in four spectacular fights, in one of which 21 American planes were pitted against approximately 100 enemy fighters. In all 79 Sabre Jets were opposed by 196 enemy aircraft. The Red radio claimed that three American jets were shot down, but this was not confirmed by the Fifth Air Force.

The Allied communique described the enemy airmen participating in these combats as "very aggressive." American pilots said the fighting on Sunday was among the roughest of the air war in Korea.

On the following day United States Sabre Jets shot down two more enemy MIGs and damaged two others in a fierce battle south of Uiju. Again the American planes were outnumbered two to one.

On Tuesday, 8 Jan., American F-86 Sabre Jet pilots sighted more than 100 enemy MIG jet fighters over the Anju-Chongchong River and Kunu-ri area. They engaged 40 and damaged one enemy plane. Two other large formations of Red planes were encountered during the day in the Sinanju area, but no claims of enemy losses were made.

Total losses of enemy MIG-15s in air combat during the Korean war are now estimated at 157 destroyed, 31 probably destroyed, and 333 damaged.

During the first part of the week heavy strikes were made by Allied land planes against enemy lines of communications, bridges, tunnels, supply areas and front-line artillery positions. Later in the week fog and snow greatly reduced the Allied air effort.

American F-84 Thunder Jet fighter-bombers blasted an important rail tunnel between Pyongyang and Sunchon with 16 tons of high explosives. Pilots reported that their bombs exploded inside the tunnel, causing a series of secondary explosions and a rising cloud of heavy black smoke. Two other tunnels were also damaged. In addition the Thunder Jets cratered railway tracks in numerous places between Sinanju and Sunan and east of Haeju.

Multiple rail cuts were made between Kunu-ri, Sunchon and Sandongin and many rail cars were damaged by F-80 Shooting Stars, F-51 Mustangs and Marine F4Us shattered rails in many places between Chungghwa, Hwangju, and Sarilwon.

In strikes close behind enemy lines Allied fighter-bombers destroyed or damaged many vehicles, several anti-aircraft gun positions, and field artillery guns. Two tanks were damaged west of Changjon.

American B-29 medium bombers continued their round-the-clock interdiction bombing, as Superforts dropped 80 tons of 500-lb. high explosive bombs on the important marshalling yards at Kunu-ri, while others hit Red troop concentrations near the battle line. Bombs were dropped by radar aiming technique and good results were claimed. All returned safely.

Bombing Continuous

Heavy night attacks were made on Communist rail and highway traffic by American B-26 light bombers and Marine aircraft. Three locomotives were destroyed and 7 damaged, while scores of railway cars, including tank cars, were destroyed or damaged. There was a light sighting of road traffic, but numerous trucks were destroyed.

In its weekly casualty report the Defense Department this week announced that total American casualties for the Korean war, including all reported to next of kin through 4 Jan., amounted to 104,084, an increase of 345 in a week. These include 17,834 killed in action or died of wounds; 75,374 wounded in action, including 1,696 who subsequently died; and 12,760 missing in action, including 188 known to have died, 174 known to be prisoners, and 1,391 returned to military control, leaving 11,007 currently missing. The Defense Department has not yet accepted as confirmed the list of some 3,200 American prisoners of war submitted by the Communist truce negotiators.

Of the total American casualties 85,420 were sustained by the Army, 1,193 by the Navy, 16,514 by the Marine Corps, and 957 by the Air Force.

said. The second increment numbers 784; the third, 644, and the fourth, 402.

Among the names listed by the Navy were 27 Regular Waves of the line (as previously carried in THE JOURNAL on 22 and 29 Dec.) One officer, Katherine Rash Riley, who was listed by THE JOURNAL, has since resigned and her name was removed from the promotion list. No substitution was made. The Navy said promotional procedures for these officers, as well as the six Regular Staff Corps Waves—all of whom will receive permanent appointments as lieutenant commander—"will be announced by individual letter."

Reserve Waves selected by the board were not carried on a separate list, but are intermingled with the names of male officers on each of the lists.

The zone of eligibles covered by the selection board, which convened during November and completed deliberations last month, consisted of officers with dates of rank as lieutenants from 1 May 1945 to 2 Jan. 1946.

The complete lists are arranged in alphabetical order and show the increment in which promotion will be effected. In numerous instances, the first names of officers have been shortened by the Bureau of Naval Personnel so that William may read "Willi," or Maurice "Mauric," etc. The lists follow:

Eisenhower for President

The political supporters of General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower put him definitely in the running for the Republican presidential nomination this week. The General himself, while stating that he would not take part in the pre-convention campaign, made it clear that he would accept the nomination if offered.

The long awaited announcement came in the form of an exchange of letters between Governor Sherman Adams of New Hampshire and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Massachusetts. Governor Adams brought up the question of nominating petitions in the forthcoming primaries in his state and asked Senator Lodge if he could say definitely which political party could claim General Eisenhower as a member.

Senator Lodge's Letter

Senator Lodge replied in part: "I cannot refer this matter to General Eisenhower because, as a member of the Army on active duty, he is prohibited by Army regulations from engaging directly or indirectly in a nomination campaign. Army regulations No. 600-10 reads in part as follows:

"... the prohibition includes ... participation in political campaign ... or any other public activity looking to the influencing of an election or the solicitation of votes for themselves or others."

"In the circumstances, therefore, I consider it incumbent on me to divulge certain conversations which I had with General Eisenhower while he was serving in a civilian capacity at Columbia University.

"Senator Duff and Senator Carlson and others have told me that they have had similar conversations. During these discussions he specifically said that his voting record was that of a Republican. He also pointed out that his political convictions coincided with enlightened Republican doctrine and that the family tradition was Republican.

"In these circumstances, the signers of the Republican petition are completely secure in their signed sworn statement that General Eisenhower is a member of their party. On the other hand, the Democratic petitioners are swearing to something that is contrary to fact.

"It is worth noting that in our conversations with General Eisenhower he pointed out that he would never seek public office but would consider a call to political service by the will of the party and the people to be the highest form of duty."

Gen. Eisenhower's Statement

The exchange of letters was made public on 6 January. Later General Eisenhower issued the following statement from his headquarters in Paris:

"Sen. Lodge's announcement of yesterday, as reported in the press, gives an accurate account of the general tenor of my political convictions and of my Republican voting record.

"He was correct also in stating that I would not seek nomination to political office. I have frequently and publicly expressed my refusal to do so. My convictions in this regard have been reinforced by the character and importance of the duty with which I was charged more than a year ago by my country and the other nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"America's enlightened self-interest and the future of Western civilization alike demand success in our collective effort to produce security against the Communist threat and so to preserve peace.

"Under no circumstances will I ask for reelection from this assignment in order to seek nomination for political office and I shall not participate in the pre-convention activities of others who may have such an intention with respect to me.

"Of course there is no question of the right of American citizens to organize in pursuit of their common convictions. I realize that Sen. Lodge and his associates are exercising this right in an attempt to place before me next July a duty that would transcend my present responsibilities.

"In the absence, however, of a clear-cut call to political duty, I shall continue to devote my full attention and energies to the performance of the vital task to which I am assigned."

Political Activities

Queried by reporters as to an interpretation of the regulations concerning political activities by officers of the Army, the Department of Defense issued the following memorandum:

"A. Army regulations do not require an officer to resign his Army commission if he announces his willingness to accept a nomination for public office if tendered, but they do preclude any political activity in the campaign.

"B. Should such an officer actively take part in the campaign in any way, it would be a violation of Army regulations (see Para. 17 and 18, A. R. 600-10, current series), and

New Model Army jeep to go into production soon. The snorkel tubes, permitting it to run submerged, can be installed in 15 minutes. The Army's Detroit Arsenal says the new model has better springs, a 72-horsepower engine instead of 60, body is five inches longer, wheel base an inch longer, and has softer seats.

If he desires to take an active part in the campaign, he may be removed from the active list of the Army in some manner such as by retirement, or resignation.

"C. S. C. 576)."

Blood Donor Facilities

Shortly after ceremonies 8 Jan. marking the opening of blood donor facilities in the Main Navy Department Building in Washington, D. C., Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, Surgeon General of the Army, and his Deputy, Brig. Gen. Silas B. Hays, became the first Army personnel to give blood at the new collecting center.

Since the Office of the Army Surgeon General is located in the Navy building, a continuing schedule has been established calling for a weekly quota of ten donors from among the military and civilian employees on duty there.

Marine Housing Revamped To Aid Low Income Groups

Orders have gone out to Marine Corps commands to conduct a sweeping reorganization of housing programs at Marine bases, with "ability to pay" as a new yardstick in determining the allocation of rental housing both on and off Marine Corps installations.

The plan is aimed primarily at providing for the housing needs of enlisted personnel of the lower four pay-grades, but affects all Marine officers, warrant officers and staff NCO's, as well as civilian employees of the Corps, who maintain homes on or near Marine bases.

Basically, it provides that high-income personnel be moved out of low-rental housing and offered high-rental housing, thus creating vacancies for personnel in the lower pay brackets. It further directs that if such housing is refused by the high-income personnel, they "should be denied eligibility for access to controlled units."

Consider Low Pay Grades

The order was dispatched by General Clifton B. Cates, shortly before he left the office of Commandant. In directing the new procedures he points out that past allocations "have rarely taken into consideration the needs of personnel in the lower four pay-grades."

General Cates said that although some personnel may plead "hardship" under the terms of the new policy, "it must be remembered that many Marines not eligible for controlled 'low-cost' housing under present allocations are suffering from high rents and sub-standard conditions."

A Senate Preparedness Subcommittee report last Fall on "tragic" and "deplorable" housing at military bases, said that one of the "worst situations" it found was at the Marine Base, Camp Lejeune, N. C., where investigators charged some Marines were taking advantage of the housing shortage by renting quarters to their fellow Marines at high rents.

Lejeune Action

Maj. Gen. Ray A. Robinson, Commanding General at Camp Lejeune, took immediate action on the new directive by restricting the assignment of housing at Midway Park (a low-rental area) to enlisted personnel of the lower pay grades. General Robinson told officers, warrant officers and staff NCO's in the Midway area that it is his desire that they avail themselves "of the more adequate housing at Tarawa Terrace (or, if preferred, the New River apartments) in keeping with your rank, and by so doing, release your present unit for assignment to personnel in the lower income bracket." Both of the latter areas are in the higher rental groups.

He said it was not his "immediate intention to force any personnel to move from Midway Park but to appeal to your sense of 'fair play' and request that you, at your own accord, make way for those less able to pay the higher rentals."

Staff NCO's now living in Trailer Park (another low-rental area) were directed to file immediate applications for higher-rental units. General Robinson warned them, "If you fail to make application or upon notification that a unit is available, refuse to accept, you will normally be required to vacate your present unit at Trailer Park within 15 days."

Civilians Affected

Similar notices also went out to civilian employees in both the Midway and Trailer Park areas.

In all cases where personnel are slated for transfer, discharge or release within 90 days, they will be permitted to retain the housing they now have.

Brig. Gen. W. S. Fellers, Deputy Commander at Camp Lejeune, immediately set up a priority allocation plan, listing the ranks who will be permitted to occupy housing in each of the Camp's housing areas. He directed that "All personnel who ... are ineligible for their present housing should contact the Housing Office ... regarding the availability of units within the project for which they are eligible."

Text of Directive

In compliance with the Commandant's directive, other Marine bases are expected to set up similar programs shortly. The full text of the order follows:

"From: Commandant of the Marine Corps

"To: Distribution List

"Subj: Allocation of rental housing

"1. Considerable quantities of rental housing, both on and off-station have been, or are being built for the benefit of personnel at many Marine Corps stations. Besides controlling the rental list for on-station housing, Commanders, by agreement with landlords, have succeeded in many instances in obtaining control of off-station rental lists. Station Commanders have allocated available controlled housing according to the requirements of local situations.

"2. In furtherance of this type of allocation, it is directed as a matter of policy, in order to satisfy as much as possible the needs of the ranks, that the lower rental housing be allocated to the groups of military and civilian personnel with the lower income, and that each allocation consider the 'group ability' to pay prevailing gross rental for each type of housing.

"3. Past allocation have rarely taken into consideration the needs of personnel in the lower four pay-grades. It is considered that as controlled 'high rental' housing (such as Title VIII housing) becomes available, staff non-commissioned officers, warrant officers, commissioned officers and well-paid civilians should be moved out of 'low rental' housing (such as trailers and Lanham Act housing) and offered 'high rental' housing. If such housing is refused, personnel should be denied eligibility for access to controlled units.

"4. The specific allocation should be determined by station Commanders according to the relative supply and 'ability to pay' at each station.

"5. While it is recognized that many individuals will plead 'hardship' under the terms of this policy, it must be remembered that many Marines not eligible for controlled 'low-cost' housing under present allocations are suffering from high rents and sub-standard conditions.

At Long Last, Warrant Officer Bill Ready

Department of Defense officials revealed this week that final review of the long-pending Warrant Officer Bill is now being accomplished at the Pentagon.

The measure, which was first called for in the passage of the Career Compensation Act in October 1949, is slated for early transmittal to the Bureau of the Budget.

It is expected to reach Capitol Hill early in the current session. If it doesn't, the Pentagon is certain to hear from Representative Paul Kilday (D-Tex.) of the Armed Services Committee and Representative Pat Sutton (D-Tenn.), who was promised a Warrant Officer Bill by 1 Feb. 1951.

The legislation now under Pentagon scrutiny will parallel the Officer Personnel Act very closely. No percentages will be set up for the four warrant officer grades, but instead there will be a mandatory requirement for consideration after specific time in grade service.

The Warrant Officer Bill will provide for promotion by selection and, as for officers, two consecutive "pass-overs" will mean separation from active duty.

Little difficulty is foreseen for the passage of such a measure.

Army Training To Include Atomic Weapons Use

The tactical employment of atomic weapons will become increasingly important in Army training in 1952. Already there are evidences of progress in this field.

General Mark W. Clark, Chief, Army Field Forces, reports from Ft. Monroe, Va., that the tactical employment of atomic missiles has been incorporated in all phases of training. He said that all personnel, from the individual rifleman to field army staffs are being indoctrinated in the offensive and defensive tactics of atomic warfare.

And from Camp Drum, N. Y., headquarters for Exercise Snowfall, Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittenger, USA, maneuver director, said that for the first time in Army-Air Force history the employment of atomic tactical weapons will be simulated down to the division level.

Troops taking part in Exercise Snowfall this month and in February will make tactical use of knowledge gained during the late 1951 atomic tests at Desert Rock, Nev.

General Crittenger said, "Exercise Snowfall will be the first instance in which a simulated atomic bomb will influence the operations of ground troops in an Army-Air Force training maneuver. Units will be assessed either gains or losses in their military operations according to the estimated effect of simulated explosions. These estimates will be assessed by specially trained teams of umpires."

Atomic weapons tactics will be employed also in the Army-Air Force Exercise Long Horn, scheduled for March-April in Texas.

The Army Field Forces and the Tactical Air Command are working together very closely on all plans covering atomic weapons training.

Gen. Horkan Stresses Economy in QM Duties

Maj. Gen. George A. Horkan, The Quartermaster General of the Army, this week told a world-wide conference of Quartermaster Corps stock control and stock accounting officials that the most rigid economy must be applied in all phases of current Quartermaster planning, operations, and procurement.

The charge was given at the opening session on 7 Jan. of a week-long conference at the Office of The Quartermaster General in Washington, D. C. and attended by key stock control and stock accounting personnel from the United States and major overseas commands.

General officers participating in the sessions, in addition to General Horkan, included Brig. Gen. Howard L. Peckham, Acting The Deputy, The Quartermaster General; Brig. Gen. Arthur L. Marshall, Acting Assistant for Administration; Brig. Gen. Ira K. Evans, Acting Assistant for Operations; and Brig. Gen. Patrick H. Tansey, Chief, Supply Division, G-4, Army General Staff.

The conference, the second annual session of its kind, was devoted to discussions of a wide group of subjects related to various phases of stock control and accounting with the purpose of exchanging information and developing improved and more efficient methods.

In welcoming the conferees, General Horkan explained that stock control and accounting are the basis of administrative and executive action, and the efficient functioning of the Quartermaster Corps as a whole depends very largely upon the effectiveness with which control and accounting are executed.

General Horkan told the conference it is essential always to bear in mind the fundamental principles involved in the Quartermaster Corps mission. "The Corps exists solely to supply the American soldier with the things he needs," the General said. "The soldier is the Number One man on our defense team and everything we plan and do is to get the supplies to him. These supplies must be what he needs. He must have them in sufficient amounts, when he needs them, and where he needs them."

Consideration must constantly be given to the American taxpayer, the General said. "The taxpayer pays the bill and he has a right to expect and receive full value for his money. This means the most stringent economy, the most careful planning, and savings at every step in our procedures."

The General said that American industry must be considered an equal partner on the team for defense and it is necessary to maintain the best possible relations with those who produce the supplies. "We have always found industry willing to cooperate to the fullest extent. It is my intention that we shall continue to maintain the best possible relations with industry, because without industry's full-hearted support, it would be impossible successfully to carry out our supply mission."

General Tansey explained methods that are being developed to shorten the time between the requisitioning and delivery of supplies which will result in economies by lessening the amounts of stocks that must be carried on hand.

U. S. Armed Forces order bigger, faster Constellations

*Leadership demands
constant achievement*

A new Constellation, combining greater size, greater range and greater speed with an unmatched record of dependability, is now in quantity production for the U. S. Armed Forces.

Designed to carry more troops and cargo and more personnel more efficiently over great distances at high speeds, this military transport provides many advantages. A few:

1. MORE CARGO CAPACITY: 18.4 feet longer than the regular Constellation; 5,568 cubic feet of space, capable of carrying over 17 tons 2,330 statute miles at standard operating gross weight.
2. ALL-METAL FLOOR: watertight magnesium floor offers greater strength, ease of loading.
3. EFFICIENCY: greater power plus greater payload results in low direct operating cost.
4. SPECIAL LOADABILITY FEATURES: built-in mechanical conveyor; extra-strong tie-down fittings; large doors and other cargo-handling features never before offered.

It will carry either 106 passenger troops or 73 litter patients. And it can be quickly converted from troop carrier to cargo carrier, increasing its round-trip efficiency for the Armed Forces.

Enemy Forces in Korea Lose Heavily To Navy

Rear Adm. R. A. Ofstie, Acting Commander of Naval Forces in the Far East, has released a report showing the cumulative damages which the Navy has inflicted on enemy forces in Korea during the past twelve months. Combined air and surface attacks by the Navy have resulted in the destruction of 689 bridges, 77 locomotives, 2,654 rail rolling stocks, 2,660 vehicles and 4,674 railroad track cuts. Additional damage was done to 1,690 bridges, 153 locomotives, 4,374 rail rolling stocks and 1,859 vehicles.

The Navy pointed out that the totals include only the destruction carried on by the Navy in the east half of North Korea. They do not include the extensive operations of United Nations Naval Units employed off the Korean west coast.

Admiral Ofstie said "These one year figures clearly show that our Naval assaults have cost the communists heavily in vehicles, rail lines, bridges and munitions. The enemy has had to double and triple his efforts to get supplies through to the front lines. In addition he has been forced to divert a considerable amount of his effort and materials toward large scale counter-interdiction effort of his own."

He also pointed out that the Naval action marks "the first employment of sustained ground interdiction by Naval forces." The major share of the interdiction duty has been shouldered by the fast carrier force, Task Force 77, commanded by Rear Adm. Joseph J. Clark, which cruises continuously off the East Coast in the Sea of Japan.

Marine Corps Establishes Third Div. at Pendleton

The Third Marine Brigade at Camp Pendleton, Calif., was redesignated this week as the Third Marine Division, with Brig. Gen. Merrill B. Twining, as acting Division Commander.

Brig. Gen. Twining

Reportedly slated for movement to Hawaii, the Brigade had been commanded since its activation last summer by Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Puller, who will remain as Assistant Division Commander.

According to Marine Corps Headquarters, the change in designation, which became effective on 7 Jan., this week, has been in the planning stage for several months but does not involve any increase in the size of the Corps.

A bill now pending in Congress would provide the Marines with a force of from three- to four-hundred thousand enlisted men, and 25,000 to 33,000 officers. The Corps said the new division, although it is now understrength, "will provide the framework for a full division if such is indicated in the future." It pointed out further, that the change "was in accordance with plans formulated several months ago and does not constitute an augmentation of forces at this time."

General Twining, whose permanent appointment as Brigadier General is also pending Congressional approval, is 49, and has served for 27 years in the Marine Corps. At present, he is Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force Troops, at Camp Pendleton.

A 1923 graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, he served during World War II as Operations Officer of the First Marine Division on Guadalcanal, and later as Assistant Chief of Staff of the First Amphibious Corps, commanded by General A. A. Vandegrift. Immediately prior to his present command, he served as Commanding General of the Marine Corps Training and Replacement Command at Camp Pendleton.

General Twining is a brother of Air Force Vice Chief of Staff General Nathan F. Twining.

Marine Bill Hearing Set

The House Rules Committee has set 15 Jan. as the date to hear the appeal of House Armed Services Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) for House action on the Marine Corps Bill.

Legislation as endorsed by the House Armed Services Committee would provide for membership of the Marine Corps Commandant on the Joint Chiefs of Staff and for a minimum Marine Corps strength of 300,000.

The Senate bill provided for "consultant" status of the Commandant on JCS and omitted any minimum strength.

USNR Promotion Zones

In connection with Navy selection boards which will meet next month to recommend line and staff corps officers of the Naval Reserve for promotion to the grades of captain and commander, the following table shows the register numbers of junior officers in Reserve promotion zones:

USNR Register Issue	Line	To Captain
		MC	SC	ChC	CEC	DC	MSC

1951	797	40090	500584	600255	631272	700299

The boards will meet on or about 12 Feb. and complete details were contained in the 5 Jan. issue of THE JOURNAL.

* No MSC Captains will be selected. About 23 MSC lieutenant commanders are expected to be named by the boards for promotion to commander.

Gen. Shepherd's Plans (Continued from First Page)

Thomas will become Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps (JOURNAL 5 Jan.).

General Thomas will relieve Lt. Gen. Merwin H. Silverthorn who will take command of the Marine Corps Recruit Depot at Parris Island, S. C. General Shepherd lauded General Silverthorn who, he said, is due for a field command "after almost five years of Washington duty."

General Silverthorn will relieve Maj. Gen. Robert H. Pepper who will take command of the Third Division at Pendleton, relieving Brig. Gen. Merrill B. Twining who was assigned only this week as Acting Division Commander.

Transfer of a regimental combat team of the Third Division to the Marine Corps Air Station at Kaneohe, Hawaii, will take place in about 6-9 months, General Shepherd said.

General Shepherd said his "primary objective" as Commandant will be to preserve the superior accomplishments of his predecessor, General Clifton B. Cates. He outlined his plans for the Marine Corps in these words:

"Particularly, I will emphasize the readiness aspect of our field forces. The American people look upon the Marine Corps as a sort of fire brigade, fully prepared to respond on short notice when crises arise. . . I intend that we will be able to meet any such fire-call whenever it occurs. . . I intend, also, to emphasize the development of the Marine air-ground fighting team in which we Marines believe so strongly, at the same time working with all possible vigor on new developments, especially in the field of amphibious operations."

The new Commandant said he plans to "stress economy in all that we do," adding that the Marines "have always been proud of their reputation for economy" and ability to live on an austerity basis. He said, "Today, we are giving the best honest dollar's worth of service for every tax dollar spent on the Corps. At the same time it will be my objective to improve our economic position further and eliminate waste wherever we find it."

General Shepherd had no comment to make on the bill now pending in Congress which would make the Marine Commandant a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. "When it is finally settled," he said, "it will be done by my superiors, and on that basis I do not feel free to comment."

He indicated that the Marine Corps plans to make wide use of the helicopter in the future, and that the helicopter has presented one possible solution to the dispersal problem imposed by atomic warfare. He said the helicopter will enable Marine troops to land "in widely dispersed areas."

Discussing the use of Marine aviation in Korea, he said, "There is a difference in concept between the approach to close air support as we see it and that used by the Air Force and Army." The Marine concept, he pointed out, involves direct control of air units by the ground forces. This system is not used in Korea, he added, but "This is not to say that failure to use this system has prevented the First Marine Division from performing its duty to the complete satisfaction of the Eighth Army, nor has it prevented the First Marine Air Wing from winning the praise of the Fifth Air Force."

Expansion "Necessary"

General Curtis LeMay, Commanding General of the Strategic Air Command, revealed this week that the Joint Chiefs of Staff "have decided it is necessary to build" the Air Defense Command, the Strategic Air Command and the Tactical Air Command "well beyond their present level."

Speaking at the National Retail Dry Goods Association Convention in New York City on 7 Jan., General LeMay said Air Force personnel strength has doubled in the nineteen months since the Communists first struck in Korea, and the number of combat wings has "reached approximately double." Although all three AF commands "are capable of carrying on important and powerful operations right at this minute," he said, "other plans have been approved by the Joint Chiefs of Staff" to build them into an even more effective fighting machine.

He said the Joint Chiefs "have also approved increase in Naval Air power, a fact which indicates the increasing importance of air power as a whole to the successful operations of the national defense team."

The Strategic Air Commander said he sees "no alternative to maintaining a strong military establishment, and especially a strong Air Force, even at the cost of considerable inconvenience and expense to ourselves."

He pointed out that Russia has a new plane—the MIG-15—"which compares favorably with our best interceptor, the F-86" and that although "we could easily produce more F-86 planes than we are producing," that would not completely solve the problem. He said, "if we are going to defeat the MIG-15 what we must do is not merely produce more F-86s, but also something even better than the F-86." He warned, "Unless we develop and maintain sufficient airpower, we can be driven out of any region."

General LeMay said, "In this age of atomic weapons, if we are attacked, there are three tasks of paramount importance peculiar to the Air Force which must be successfully executed if we are to survive as a nation." He outlined the tasks and their relation to the three Air Force commands as follows:

Air Defense Command

"First, we must undertake to destroy any enemy bomber endeavoring to attack this country. Some enemy bombers probably will get through in any determined attack, just as Luftwaffe bombers got through the British defenses in World War II. It will be our task to stop as many as humanly possible. We plan to do this by means of speedy interceptor aircraft, operating in conjunction with a vast radar net. The Command that controls this force is known as the Air Defense Command."

SAC

"Second, if an aggressor starts a war, we must plan to strike enemy bomber installations and destroy as much as possible of an enemy's bomber force even before it can become airborne, then we must destroy his war making industry as soon as possible thereafter. The Strategic Air Command, with its long-range bomber force and atomic weapons, is charged with this mission. The main striking force of the Strategic Air Command today is composed of long-range bombers. A larger, faster, and more powerful version of the B-29 of World War II is the B-50. Perhaps you remember that a B-50 was flown over 23,000 miles around the world non-stop several years ago. Another of our bombers is the B-36, our first truly inter-continental bomber. Just a few weeks ago, on a return trip, B-36's flew non-stop from an Air Force field in North Africa to their home base in Texas. The B-47, a six-engine jet bomber, is just beginning to come into our force. The XB-52, an eight-engine jet, was revealed over the past weekend. In addition to the bomber aircraft we have escort fighters, transports, and tanker aircraft for inflight refueling. This striking force would be launched against industrial targets in the enemy's homeland in the early days of another war."

TAC

"Besides accomplishing the tasks of air defense and long range bombing, we must apply airpower directly against enemy air and surface forces and must destroy the enemy air force as rapidly as possible in order to save our own nation and our allies from continued damage or destruction."

"The Tactical Air Command has been given the primary mission of training for the direct support of ground forces. This command is equipped with fighter and a light bomber type aircraft which carry weapons suitable for attack against targets near at hand."

Boost Combat Strength

50%; Manpower 20%

The Air Force plans a 50 per cent increase in combat strength "with no more than 20 per cent increase in personnel," General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff, declared this week.

He said that this would be achieved by skillful management together with "unprecedented frugality" in the use of manpower and finally through "austerity."

General Vandenberg's remarks were made at the opening of the first Commanders' Course in Air Force Manpower Management at George Washington University in the Nation's Capital.

Listed herewith are the officers attending this four-weeks sessions, which will be followed by three similar classes. The manpower management classes were started in June 1950, but heretofore have been limited to staff officers and key civilians, 500 of whom have been graduated.

General Vandenberg told the commanders:

"The Joint Chiefs of Staff have recommended that we proceed as rapidly as possible with the construction of a certain minimum air strength—a strength sufficient, we hope, to serve as a deterrent, or in any case to guarantee the survival of this nation in the event of a general war. So stringent are the limitations pertaining to manpower and other resources that in order to carry out even this limited expansion the Air Force must somehow accomplish a seemingly impossible task. We propose to raise the combat strength of the Air Force by 50 per cent with no more than 20 per cent increase in personnel. How? Through skillful management together with unprecedented frugality in the use of manpower, and finally through austerity."

"Whether this can be done remains to be seen. In any case, we are determined to attempt it. And we shall succeed only if every man and woman in the Air Force uniform and every one of the tens of thousands of civilians who assist us in our mission is used in a manner that will bring out their maximum talents and capabilities."

"In every great organization there is bound to be some lost motion, some wasted effort, some misuse of talent. But, if the Air Force is to succeed in the austere task it has set for itself, you and all the other commanders and staff officers must make full use of all that industry and business can teach us about scientific methods for the management of people and of resources. This is why your attendance at this school is so important—why you must learn all that can be learned here, not only for your own direct use, but to carry back to your organizations for the widest possible application."

Reserve Transfer Date Set

The Air Force has established 30 June as the official transfer date for Volunteer Air Reserve officers who have not qualified for retention in the VAR.

Volunteer Air Reservists, to hold their VAR assignments, must maintain their proficiency by earning at least an average of 15 points annually or a total of 45 points during any three-year period. Proficiency points of VAR reservists are computed annually by their major air command on their assignment date anniversaries.

It is already too late for many VAR reservists who have failed to maintain their proficiency to earn sufficient points for retention by the established transfer date of 30 June.

A saving grace, however, is that transfer dates for Mobilization Designees or Volunteer Air Reserve Training Unit members have been set for three years from their assignment anniversary dates.

VAR members who are short on proficiency points therefore may still retain their status in the Volunteer Reserve by actively participating in the Reserve Program through accepting a mobilization designation or joining a unit, Air Force officials explained.

New Strip Camera

The Air Force this week exhibited a new shutterless strip camera which will make sharp pictures at speeds up to 3,000 miles per hour. It was shown at the meeting of the American Society of Photogrammetry at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D. C.

The camera, which is automatically operated, can be used in guided missiles and airplanes. According to Col. G. W. Goddard, USAF, Chief of the Photo Reconnaissance Laboratory at Wright-Patterson Air Base, Dayton, Ohio, the new camera can take pictures from an altitude of 500 feet which will show the grain in wood of railway ties.

Colonel Goddard pointed out that the new camera will produce pictures as clear as those made by any photographer using a conventional camera, with a time exposure of the ground, from an elevation of 500 feet. He said the use of this camera by the Air Force would make obsolete for service use all shutter-equipped cameras. It is so operated that exact exposures are obtained, independent of action by the pilot.

The Air Force also exhibited a new aerial camera magazine, which permits the development of pictures of enemy troop movements and installations while in the air. The pictures can be taken and developed within a two-minute period. The pictures may be then dropped to ground forces in a cardboard container with a red streamer attached, providing ground force commanders with almost immediate pictorial information of great tactical value. Two of these magazines are now in use experimentally in Korea.

Colonel Meyer, who has been wing commander since September 1949, was named to the National Executive Board, creating the command vacancy. He succeeds Col. James L. Biggs, of Barre, Vt., on the Board. General Carl A. Spaatz, USAF-Ret., chairman of the National Executive Board, recently announced with General Beau that the next quarterly meet of the Board would take place at Bolling AFB, Washington, D. Medical Policy Council

Director of Medical Services as its head. The first Director, Dr. Raymond B. Allen, was succeeded by Dr. Richard L. Meiling. Under the direction of the Secretary of Defense, the Director had the authority to establish general policies and programs for the medical services and to exercise general direction and control over their personnel and facilities. On 2 Jan., 1951, Secretary of Defense Marshall created the present Armed Forces Medical Policy Council by combining in it the responsibilities of the Office of Medical Services and the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee.

The membership of the Council consists of a civilian chairman, vice chairman, and three civilian members, appointed by the Secretary of Defense from among national leaders in the medical and health fields, and the Surgeons General of the three military departments. The Council thus provides for coordination, at the highest Defense Department level, of the medical problems of the three services and, at the same time, of the interrelated problems of military and civilian medicine.

The writer is the present Chairman of the Council. The appointment of Dr. Melvin A. Casberg, formerly Dean of the St. Louis University School of Medicine, as Vice Chairman, has been announced by the Secretary of Defense to become effective on 1 Jan., 1952. The three civilian members are Dr. I. S. Ravdin, Professor of Surgery at the University of Pennsylvania; Dr. Alfred R. Shands, Jr., Medical Director of the Alfred I. DuPont Institute at Wilmington, Delaware, and Dr. James P. Hollers, a Doctor of Dentistry in San Antonio, Texas. Major General George E. Armstrong, Surgeon General of the Army; Rear Admiral H. Lamont Pugh, Surgeon General of the Navy, and Major General Harry G. Armstrong, Surgeon General of the Air Force, complete the membership. Captain Hilton W. Rose (MC) USN is the Executive Secretary.

The staff of the Council, all military personnel, includes a Brigadier General of the Army, a Rear Admiral from the Navy, and a Brigadier General of the Air Force, each of whom heads one of the three divisions in the staff organization. To each of these divisions are assigned two additional officers of the rank of Colonel (Army or Air Force) and Captain (Navy).

These divisions—the Planning Coordination Division, the Military Affairs Divisions, and the Civil and Military Interrelations Division—have the following responsibilities. The Planning Coordination Division coordinates medical and health problems associated with the mobilization and the strategic and logistic planning agencies. The Military Affairs Division is responsible for the coordination and standardization of programs, joint utilization of facilities, standardization of medical and dental reports and records, within the three services. The Civil and Military Interrelations Division provides liaison between the Department of Defense and civilian medical organizations on medical and health matters, both within and outside the government and both national and international.

In the past two years the Council and its predecessor organization have been successful in improving administrative efficiency through unification of effort and the standardization of methods and procedures among the three services. One example is the Armed Services Medical Regulating Office which acts as a clearing house for the allocation of patients of all three services to the military hospitals in this country. Under its control, hospitals are being used jointly by the services whenever such use affords either certain specialized treatment for the patient or a more even distribution of workload among the hospitals. For instance, an Army or Air Force patient may be sent to a Navy hospital, or vice versa.

Another example of improved efficiency is the standardization of dental and certain medical records and reports for all three services. This has eliminated the confusion which formerly arose when personnel of one service received medical or dental care from a service other than their own.

Additional accomplishments in the past year have been the establishment of the Armed Forces Hospital Expansion Planning Program, the approval of preliminary drawings of standard plans for permanent and non-permanent Armed Force hospitals, the adoption of the principle of built-in clinics rather than the conventional out-patient department, the adoption of the back pressure arm-lift (Holger Nielsen) method of artificial respiration, coordination of research in the medical and health fields with the Research and Development Board, point credits for reserve officers attending the Section on Military Medicine of the American Medical Association, and the Armed Forces Blood Donor Program.

The Armed Forces Blood Donor Program, which was developed under the guidance of the Armed Forces Medical Policy Council in cooperation with the American Red Cross, has produced perhaps the most impressive results of any of the Council's accomplishments. For the first time, a program exists which provides a continued supply of blood to the armed forces and a replenishment of the stocks of dried plasma necessary for a war reserve. This availability of blood and blood plasma to the men wounded in the Korean theatre has been a primary factor in achieving the lowest mortality rate for the wounded that this country has ever known.

Note: Dr. Lovelace, author of the above article and chairman of the Armed Forces Medical Policy Council, served with the Air Force in World War II and is head of the Section on Surgery of the Lovelace Clinic in Albuquerque, N. Mex. He not only is a distinguished surgeon but is widely known for his research in aviation medicine. He was co-winner (with Dr. W. M. Boothby and Col. H. G. Armstrong) of the Collier Trophy award in 1940. In 1948 he was given the Jeffries Award. He also holds the Distinguished Flying Cross.

"If we drive ahead, with courage and vigor and determination, we can by the end of 1952 be in a position of much greater security. The way will be dangerous for years ahead, but if we put forth our best efforts this year—and next year—we can be 'over the hump' in our effort to build strong defenses."—PRESIDENT TRUMAN.

Save UMT! There is grave danger that the program of Universal Military Training may be scuttled. Many members of Congress, operating under the mistaken belief that large numbers of voters oppose UMT, are seeking some way out of the commitment given the country last June when they enacted the law establishing a basis for such a plan. One group, led by Representative Brownson (R-Ind), will try to replace a real UMT with a sort of high school ROTC plan supplemented with short Summer camps. Other subterfuges are in the brooding and, of course, there are always the professional pacifists to lobby against an effective UMT.

Because of this situation we believe there is danger in the well-intentioned suggestion of Chairman Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee. Mr. Vinson proposes that a system of voluntary training be instituted this Summer with 60,000 youths offering to undergo six months' training followed by 18 months' active duty service. The general idea of a small-scale tryout of UMT was proposed by the Department of Defense at the time the Wadsworth Commission reported on UMT. However, the Department's plan would be based on Universal Military Training and Mr. Vinson's would not. His plan is really an authorization for two-year regular enlistments, for he substitutes $75 a month basic pay for the $30 a month provided in UMT and he eliminates the obligation for continuation in a reserve component.

We fear the opposition may seize upon Mr. Vinson's proposal with the argument "let us try this first before we adopt the complete UMT bill." In that way, they will seek to defer again the final full acceptance of UMT.

A successful UMT as a "Foundation of Enduring National Strength" can be attained only by concentrating on a complete, solid legislative act, unadulterated by any limited-authority or part time schemes.

General Eisenhower may not be actively running for office, but the political warriors should know by now that he doesn't run away from anything.

Ambassadors of Good Will. Citizens think too infrequently of the Armed Services as Ambassadors of good will, yet the holiday season just ended was replete with hundreds of examples of the spontaneous and voluntary efforts of American Service personnel to bring happiness into the lives of children all over the world. From Korea, Japan, and Okinawa to England and Germany, as well as in the States, in fact wherever Army, Navy, Air Force or Marine Corps families are stationed, officers and enlisted personnel and their wives and children have worked together to help needy families, particularly children, and to bring cheer into their lives. Clothes and food, as well as toys and candy, are gathered by purchases or collected. Days are spent renovating needed articles for presentation. Although this relief activity and organized parties mean much work and the expenditure of personal funds (no government money is used) it is done with little or no publicity or general recognition. Yet it carries the American spirit and the American way of life into the homes of thousands of families in a way that leaves them with a deeper impres-

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In view of the recent discussion over the part dogs play in life on Army posts, I thought your readers might be particularly interested in the following press release, compiled recently by the Public Information Office here at the Infantry Center, Ft. Benning, Ga.

"Visitors at this vast army post sometimes are startled upon learning that a well-constructed monument adjacent to the beautiful Infantry School building here is dedicated to the memory of a cur dog.

"Inscribed in bronze on a carved white stone block are these words:
"Calculator, Born? Died Aug. 29, 1923; He made better dogs of us all."

"Calculator, so named because of his peculiar manner of 'putting down three and carrying one' leg, first put in an appearance one day prior to 1923. He wandered about the post, decided he liked it and made it known that he had come to stay.

"Soon he became the unofficial mascot of the post and regarded all ranks from private to general as his friend. During duty hours he could be seen trotting all over the post.

"But once evening rolled around he would knock off for a few hours in nearby Columbus where he toured the spots with one of his enlisted friends.

"Usually, however, just prior to curfew he would hot-foot it on all three cylinders to a well-known hotel and catch a ride to the post with some colonel or captain, having found that a private automobile was much more comfortable than a bus for a lame dog.

"When Calculator died, the entire post mourned and personnel contributed to a fund for the monument in his memory."

It has been a long time since Calculator roamed the post here, and many dogs have come and gone, but he remains as a symbol of the "Army dog."

Citation, by the President, of the Wake detachment of the First Defense Battalion, USMC, under command of James P. "The courageous conduct of the officers and men of these units, who defended Wake Island against an overwhelming superiority of enemy air, sea, and land attacks from 8 to 22 Dec. 1941, has been noted by their fellowcountrymen and the civilized world and will not be forgotten so long as gallantry and heroism are respected and honored."

It is believed that mail communication between Fort Wadsworth, D. T., and Fort Rice, D. T., (on the Missouri River) will be kept open during the present winter. A negro express rider promises to make two trips per month all winter. An effort was made to employ Indians, but owing to the hostility between the Missouri Sioux and those in the region of Wadsworth it was found to be impracticable.

SERVICE HUMOR

During the opening period of Sunday School a few Sundays ago, the Superintendent told the children that we were going to pray, and if any of them had someone special they wished to remember to tell him. One small boy aged 7 years put his hand up. "Yes, he had a friend he would like to remember and have prayed for." Naturally the Superintendent asked if the boy was sick, whereupon the 7-year-old very mournfully said, "Oh no, he has gone to Washington, D. C."

"Sentimentalism In Pay"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Why is it that we "reason" that if a man is old enough to fight that he is old enough to handle his pay as he sees fit? When we presume that each and every soldier knows best about money, because he is wearing the uniform of his country we might as well also decide that he knows all there is to know about religion, the atom, chemistry and all the other mysteries of our complex civilization.

Why pay our soldiers all they earn each month in remote places where there is no real use for the money? Then we "beat our brains out" trying to persuade the boys that having the money is a mistake. So send it home, we say. Put it in Soldiers' Deposits. Buy Bonds or something, we preach.

The reasonable thing would be to put the surplus money into Soldiers' Deposits at 4% annual interest by a bookkeeping transaction. Then the soldier would have a nice little nest-egg and a lot of gratitude for the protection afforded when his better judgment under combat conditions was swayed unnaturally to "high spending" with low returns.

Soldiers as others are subject to pressure salesmanship and to unnatural influences. So let's help them by regulating in their favor.

We do not allow the individual soldier to decide what information will not give comfort and aid to the enemy. We decide for him. Likewise it is just as reasonable for the experts to decide in what manner the ill use of money gives aid and comfort to the enemy and to, therefore, regulate against such aid and comfort.

When in an emergency men cannot decide what is good for themselves and society; society must step in and decide for them. Let's first put away our sentiments; look at the thing in fact; and then arrive at a reasonable solution to the matter of preserving our economy by regulating and restricting the vitals where necessary and appropriate. What's wrong in deciding that a man will put his money in a bank for a rainy day when he does not need it and when the use of it by him will tend to harm him and his pals?

LIEUTENANT COLONEL,
Finance Corps

NOTE: Since our correspondent wrote the above letter, Secretary of the Army Pace has decided definitely against the proposal to withhold soldiers' pay. Nevertheless, we feel the reader's views are of wide interest.

AT a recent meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers in New York City, the view was expressed that if U. S. defense production measures were to terminate abruptly there would be a concomitant collapse of the national economy. Editors and columnists throughout the country are concerned with this problem and others imposed by the procurement and stockpiling of strategic war materials.

Douglas W. Cray, financial writer for the Providence (R. I.) Journal, says "Without the cushioning influence of some defense contracts the rubber industry in Rhode Island as a whole would probably be as hard hit as jewelry and textiles right now." He points out that there has been a steady decline in total employment and manhours in the rubber industry in his state, and says that although defense contracts help some plants "to maintain their normal working force" they also result in price wars between plants in a scramble for what little civilian business there is. Presumably, the plants do not wish to relinquish all of their civilian contracts since they must have something to fall back on in the event of defense cutbacks.

In the New York Herald-Tribune, Gene M. Brown quotes the president of U. S. Rubber, H. E. Humphreys, Jr., as predicting that the rubber industry this year will operate near capacity to meet demand for civilian and defense products. Mr. Brown says the industry this year "will concentrate on a long and complicated campaign to get the government out of the synthetic rubber business."

The metals industries, too, are having problems. The Wall Street Journal says the Office of Defense Mobilization believes there is a shortage of copper and aluminum and wants the output increased, whereas the non-ferrous metal producers think that "when the defense program has passed its acute phase these extractive industries will find themselves over-expanded, with idle capacity, unremunerative investments and inflexible overhead costs." The Journal says U. S. defense mobilization "is getting out of balance, at the risk of evil consequences which a more cautious management of it would avert."

On the other hand, Edward A. Harris, Washington Correspondent for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, "writes that Uncle Sam has dipped into his own pockets for basic metals three times this year to avoid paying sky-high prices abroad." The Government, he reports, refused to buy copper, tin, lead and zinc "at prices it considered exorbitant," and instead, dipped into the strategic stockpile. The danger of depleting these stocks was recognized, Harris adds, but "It was equally clear that if they succumbed to the wildly spiraling metals prices in foreign markets, the defense effort would be crippled by soaring prices." The copper stockpile was left "more depleted than the others" but an NPA spokesman said that "rapid acquisitions in copper and other essential metals are expected in the year ahead."

French Coup Comes at Bad Time

FRANCE's disconcerting habit of throwing out its Government at a critical time of national and international affairs overcame that nation's fidgety politicians again this week.

On the issue of bettering railroad economy (presumably by discharging unnecessary employees) Premier Plevin was unable to retain the support of his Socialist allies. The Socialists, with political logic which only a Frenchman can understand, shifted to the opposition, clashing hands with the Communists and the Gaullists (most bitter of all the foes of Socialism) and the resultant vote ended Plevin's present government as effectively as a similar domestic contretemps put him out of office last February. On that occasion, M. Plevin had just visited this country, completing a mission of great importance to France; on this occasion, by coincidence, the Churchill-Truman discussions (which again are of prime importance to France) were under way.

So far as internal affairs are concerned, we now will see what if anything Plevin's victors will do to improve their nation's economy, railroad and otherwise; the first tender of responsibility for forming a new cabinet automatically went to the Socialists (specifically to Deputy Christian Pineau) as the group responsible for upsetting the four-months' government of M. Plevin, without any assurance that other Middle parties will long travel with the Socialists.

But France's international affairs are involved profoundly, and perhaps tragically. For Plevin and his chief lieutenant, M. Schuman, have been the sponsors and architects of bold and far-reaching plans for restoring France to her former height in international matters. The Schuman plan for hastening the economic union of western Europe, starting with the joint operation and control of coal and steel resources, has made surprising progress. So have the related plan for the European Army, and to a lesser degree the more shadowy plan for political union. Through these Middle-Parties' enterprises which have won the open support of General Eisenhower (with an implied beneficial relationship in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization itself) and the more cautious tolerance, at least, of Mr. Churchill, France has undoubtedly been making a recovery in prestige as impressive as that in her own industrial economy. This week's political interruption is badly timed, for it seems impossible that a new government of any complexion whatsoever can acquire much stability before 27 Jan. when the European Army conference is to resume, or early February when the Atlantic Council is scheduled to meet in Lisbon. It should not be necessary to point out the necessity of a strong French government, oriented much like those of MM. Plevin and Schuman, if the hopes of the Treaty organization, and of SHAPE, are to be encouraged.

SHAPE's prospects have come to special attention in another respect this week with the formal entry of and for (but decidedly not by) General Eisenhower for the presidential nomination. With precise propriety the Supreme Commander in Western Europe has refused to take part in the pre-convention campaign. With a dignity almost unique in the American field of politics of our time, and an austere belief which is extremely rare in this century, that high political office should seek the man rather than the reverse, General Eisenhower has made it clear that he will accept a call to higher duty if it comes, but that he will not blow a single bugle call himself; he has his present assignment to duty and will continue to perform it. Common sense tells us he could not do anything else if he is to do his soldierly duty in the task assigned him. He remains aloof from distraction and free to conduct his tremendously important work at SHAPE, precisely as in the past, to the great present advantage of his country, the eleven other nations in NATO, and the west generally.

Incidentally, Turkey (which with Greece is scheduled to join the 12 nations presently in the North Atlantic Alliance on some basis yet to be clearly outlined) is understood to be insistent that she enter it, if at all, on a basis of full equality, rather than on a basis of Middle East privileges and responsibilities only. Instructions to this effect have been reported as going from Ankara to Turkish embassies in Paris, London, and Washington—notably to Washington in time to be made known before any solid commitments to the contrary could be entered into by Messrs. Churchill and Truman, and well before the Lisbon conference at which the exact future status of Greece and Turkey alike is scheduled for discussion. It is unlikely that Turkey's demand is necessary. From the beginning there has been American sympathy with the idea that Turkey and

Truman-Churchill Stress Unity of Purpose

AFTER a series of four conferences in Washington, President Truman and Prime Minister Winston Churchill on Wednesday, 9 Jan., issued a communique emphasizing the unity of the United States and Great Britain in the promotion of peace and their continued co-operation in resisting Communist aggression. Areas of agreement on global questions of great importance to both countries were stressed, and points of difference, such as the divergent policies as to recognition of Red China, were minimized.

Specifically the chiefs of state agreed that the use of American bases in England in an emergency would be a matter for joint decision by the United States and British governments. Previously concern had been expressed in Britain that Americans might launch air atomic attacks from these bases without consulting England.

► THE COMMUNIQUE ANNOUNCED that it was believed essential that an Allied Middle East Command be set up as soon as possible. Confidence was expressed that the Four Power approach offers the best approach for relieving the present tension as regards Egypt. The two statesmen indicated their hope that "the initiative taken by the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development will lead to a solution of the Iranian oil problem."

As to the serious questions arising in the Far East the communique stated that a broad harmony of view has emerged from the discussions, "for we recognize that the overriding need to counter the Communist threat in that area transcends such divergencies as there are in our policies toward China." This apparently means that England will not withdraw its recognition of Red China, and that the United States will not reverse its policy of non-recognition.

Mutual aid in supply of scarce materials was considered, with particular reference to the need of the United Kingdom for more steel, and of the United States for more aluminum and tin. An agreement covering these items is expected to be announced shortly.

In the interest of economy of time and money it was agreed that the United States and Great Britain would continue for the present to rely on rifles and ammunition in stock and in production, rather than adopt new weapons. Both countries, however, will produce their new rifles and ammunition on an experimental scale "while a common effort is made to devise a rifle and ammunition suitable for future standardization." The question of the Atlantic Naval command is still under discussion.

► THE TWO GOVERNMENTS AGREED to "continue to give their full support to the efforts now being made to establish a European Defense Community." Belief was expressed that this is the best means "of bringing a democratic Germany as a full and equal partner into a purely defensive organization for European security."

Mr. Churchill reached New York from England last Saturday morning and immediately flew to Washington to lunch with the President and to begin a heavy four-day schedule of conferences at the White House. Some social functions were interspersed, but from the character of the guest lists it appeared that these were continuations, rather than interruptions of the official conferences. In addition to the meetings of the chiefs of state there were numerous sessions of diplomatic, military and economic groups for the purpose of presenting and analyzing problems in specialized fields of mutual concern to both countries.

The prime minister attended the joint session of Congress on Wednesday, 9 Jan., to hear the President deliver his State of the Union message, and then left for New York for a two-day visit with his old friend Mr. Bernard Baruch, after which he was scheduled to go to Ottawa for a brief Canadian vacation. Mr. Churchill will return to Washington next week to address a joint session of Congress on Thursday, 17 Jan.

While Mr. Churchill was in Washington it was announced that the dollar balance of Great Britain had declined $900 million during the last quarter of 1951. This serious loss of exchange credits will make it much more difficult for England to import food and also basic materials essential to defense requirements and the maintenance of civilian economy. This situation apparently will necessitate further austerity measures, perhaps even more rigorous than the most severe imposed during World War II. The Truman-Churchill conference gave serious consideration to means for relieving this economic pressure, and concrete measures are under study by the top economists of both countries.

► THE BRITISH PRIME MINISTER IS understood to have told the President that Britain will adhere to its decision not to provide troops as an integral part of the projected West European army, but will encourage its formation by the continental countries and will co-operate closely with the proposed force. The prime minister is said to have agreed with Mr. Truman that the present time is not propitious for a conference with Soviet Premier Joseph Stalin. The two were in complete agreement on the necessity for a united front against Communist aggression in any part of the world.

Concern was expressed over the menace of Red invasion of Southeast Asia, where Communist guerrillas are receiving the active aid of Red China. The Chinese Communists are reported to have an army of a quarter of a million men on the border of French Indo-China, where French and native troops have been fighting in the jungles against local rebels. Increased military aid is believed certain to be extended to the anti-Communist forces in this area. This subject was scheduled to be taken up by the British, French and American chiefs of staff, with the arrival in Washington this week of Marshal Alphonse Juin of France.

Both governments are in agreement as to the necessity for continuance of the Korean truce talks at the military level, thus reinforcing the decision of the United Nations General Assembly Political Committee, which by an overwhelming vote rejected a Russian proposal to bring the armistice negotiations before the Security Council.

Truce talks in Korea are still deadlocked, but the Red negotiators this week appeared slightly more conciliatory and somewhat less truculent than in the recent past. For several days they deliberately stalled the discussions, obviously awaiting the outcome of Soviet Delegate Andrei Vishinsky's effort in Paris to bring the matter before the Security Council. The Reds still insist on their right to construct military airfields in North Korea during an armistice, but they made a slight concession in proposing that both sides agree not to bring military aircraft into Korea during a truce. They continued to reject all Allied proposals as to exchange of prisoners.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Would Gen. Eisenhower Be "Hardship" Case?—Pentagon observers who enjoy stirring up complicated problems wondered this week whether General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower would be affected by the current appropriations bill restriction on the retirement of regular officers. The proviso stipulates that no Regular officer can be retired except for physical disability or statutory age unless the Secretary of Defense says retirement is necessary for the "good of the Service" or for "hardship."

There was one suggestion that it very plainly would be a "hardship" not to let a citizen run for the Presidency if nominated.

Although General Eisenhower won't reach statutory retirement age until October 1952, the best guess was that if it's necessary, a way will be quickly found to have him placed on the retired list.

Historians recall that when General Ulysses S. Grant was elected president (he is the only U. S. Military Academy graduate to have become Chief Executive) his commission as a full general was vacated. It is also noted that at the time he was elected president he was on the active list and not eligible for retirement. Years later, after he had served two terms as president and lost out in 1880 to Garfield for the Republican nomination for third term (after leading through an exciting 36 ballots in the convention) Congress passed an act restoring his rank and placed him on the retired list.

Incidentally, when General of the Army George C. Marshall was Secretary of State, his name was carried on the retired list, although it's now on the active list. Pay and allowances for five-star rank are the same active or retired.

And What About General Vandenberg?—Aside from the intriguing aspects of the retirement problem as related to General Eisenhower, there is much speculation at the Pentagon and throughout the Air Force as to the possible effect of the retirement limitation on General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff.

General Vandenberg's four-year tour as Chief of Staff ends on 30 April. The President can reappoint him to another tour. That is seen as unlikely unless there's a turn for the worse in the international situation. Reappointment then would become probable.

If not reappointed, General Vandenberg could be given another assignment either in the Air Force or in the Department of Defense, either in the United States or abroad. (General C. B. Cates, former Marine Corps Commandant, not having attained the statutory age, was kept on duty. He's now Commanding General, Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va., with the rank of lieutenant general.)

Or else he could be retired, which would be the normal action upon an officer's leaving the post of Chief of Staff. But General Vandenberg will not reach the statutory retirement age until 24 January 1961 and the Secretary of Defense, under terms of the appropriations amendment, may have to rule that retirement would be for "the good of the service" or necessary to prevent a "hardship."

Whatever the result, there's certain to be much discussion throughout the Service about General Vandenberg's status.

Visitors have included Maj. Gen. Zenon Noriega A., Peruvian Minister of War, and Prince Mishal Bin Abdul Aziz, son of King Ibn Saud and Saudi Arabian Minister of Defense. Students from 21 countries now are attending the Infantry School.

Gen. MacArthur's Pilot Released—The Air Force has issued orders releasing Lt. Col. Anthony F. Story, former pilot and aide to General of the Army Douglas MacArthur, from active service. The relief from active duty was accomplished "for the convenience of the government."

New Fifth Army Vet—Col. John L. Owens has been named Fifth Army Veterinarian at Chicago, Ill. For the past two years, he has been director of the Dept. of Veterinary Service at the Army's Medical Field Service School.

Quite a Record—M/Sgt. George H. Black at 56 is back in the Army ready for whatever action may develop. At 15, he falsified his age, enlisted in the Navy and was a crewman aboard a destroyer rammed by a British cruiser off the Irish coast early in World War I. For heroism after the collision, he won the Navy Cross. Lightweight champion of the fleet, he left the Navy and turned pro in 1921. In 1924 he fought the great Benny Leonard in the old Madison Square Garden. Black was knocked out in two rounds. That ended his ring career, but not his fighting days.

After working as a labor boss on a plantation in Liberia, he went with Admiral Byrd to the South Pole in 1928. In 1939, Black joined the Canadian Army. He swam 600 yards to reach safety aboard a British yacht at Dunkirk and later was a member of the raiding party that hit Dieppe. He holds the British DSC for this action. Transferred to the U. S. Army after Pearl Harbor, he was in on D-Day at Normandy with the Sixth Engineer Brigade.

Communications Economy Ordered—The Army has told its commanders that there's an excess use of telecommunications—in fact, the World War II peak has been exceeded. Instructions have gone out to cut back on use of telecommunications. The Army recommended maximum use of mail, and reduction of volume and verbosity of electrically transmitted messages.

MOW Gives $6000—A contribution of $6000 divided equally among the Army Emergency Relief Society, Navy Relief Society, and Air Force Aid Society has been made by the New York Chapter of the Military Order of World Wars. The money is to assist Service families suffering hardships, especially as a result of the fighting in Korea.

Army MSC Discrimination—Members of the Army Medical Service Corps are protesting that there is discrimination against their permanent advancement. These officers note that only 2 per cent of the MSC officer strength may hold rank as permanent colonel, while for the rest of the Army the figure is 8 per cent. The permanent authorization of the MSC is 800 officers, although about 5500 are currently on active duty.

Since enactment of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, the responsibilities of top Medical Service Corps officers have been increased considerably. It is argued that the 2 per cent limitation is restricting assignment of MSC officers. Legislative action will be necessary to correct what the MSC officers regard as a serious inequity.

Family Benefits to Follow UMT in House Committee—The House Committee on Armed Services plans to go right to work on the Universal Military Training bill next Tuesday, 15 Jan. Under the provision of last year's bill, the committee recommendations must be brought before the House in 45 days.

The committee plans to follow UMT with the Survivors' Benefits Bill, which was given a partial endorsement by the subcommittee last year, with the recommendation that further hearings be held by the full committee.

After Survivors' Benefits have been disposed of, the Committee intends to take up a new public works construction bill now being prepared by the Department of Defense and the Bureau of the Budget.

Following the construction bill, the group plans to get around to the Air Force Academy bill.

Thus, without complications the committee may finish these four projects before the political conventions begin.

President to Seek Larger Forces; Better Housing—Anticipating his budget message, President Truman told Congress in his State of the Union message this week that he shall recommend some increases in the size of the Armed Forces we are building "with particular emphasis on air power."

"This means," the President said, "we shall have to continue large-scale production of planes and other equipment for a longer period of time than we had originally planned."

"Our objective," he declared, "is to have a well-equipped active defense force large enough—in concert with the forces of our Allies—to deter aggression and to inflict punishing losses on the enemy immediately if we should be attacked."

"This active force must be backed by adequate reserves, and by the plants and tools to turn out the tremendous quantities of new weapons that would be needed if war came. We are not building an active force adequate to carry on a full scale war, but we are putting ourselves in a position to mobilize very rapidly if we have to."

In a short reference, President Truman pledged support to bringing about an improvement of housing conditions for service families and a lowering of rents. He said:

"We must move right ahead this year to see that defense workers and soldiers' families get decent housing at rents they can afford to pay."

In another short reference, he said: "We should also make some cost-of-living adjustments for those receiving veterans' compensation for death or disability incurred in the service of our country."

SecDef Cites "Critical" Needs of Defense Dept.—Defense Secretary Robert A. Lovett this week cited the Cost of Living Pay Increase for military personnel and the Survivors' Benefits bill as "critical items" which the Defense Department hopes Congressional leaders will take up at an early date.

The Defense Secretary on 10 Jan. briefed the Committee on the accomplishments and problems of the Defense Establishment since the adjournment of Congress in October, and on the over-all defense picture.

He said it was not his intention to include in his presentation a reference to the particular needs of the Department for the enactment of particular legislation, but for the record he mentioned, in addition to the pay increase and survivors' benefits, the pending legislation for Universal Military Training, Public Works, the Reserve bill, the Air Force Academy Bill, the ROTC Bill and legislation which would provide adequate benefits for the survivors of deceased service personnel.

Outlining what lies ahead in the build-up of military strength, he emphasized that steady progress has been made in industrial mobilization and military production with the delivery of military hard goods and construction totaling $24 billion in fiscal '51. But he said production will increase at progressively higher rates as the tooling-up stage is completed in the months ahead.

Secretary Lovett covered the international situation in all its aspects. He warned that if the fighting in Korea were to stop, the greatest threat to world peace—the armed might of Russia and its satellites—would still exist. He said that until positive action were taken by the USSR to disarm, and to eliminate subversive activities, the free world would be unable to relax either its vigilance or its efforts to make self-preservation certain.

Prior to his assignment to the NYPE as the Army's Public Information Officer, Captain Snow was in charge of the Dependents' School on Okinawa. He attended the Public Information School at Carlisle Barracks, Penna. before assuming his duties at the New York Port of Embarkation.

■ F. E. WARREN AFB, WYO. The Officers' Wives Club, under the leadership of Mrs. Wilmer T. Pittman, added to their regular activities a busy holiday schedule for the month of December. Among their many undertakings, the Club donated and packaged candy for the children's Christmas party, and donated a drinking fountain for the Base Hospital. To climax the month's events, the Club sponsored a Christmas party for all officers of the base, which was one of the most successful of the year. This event was supervised by Mrs. Dudley Washington, with the able assistance of Mrs. A. J. Pennibton.

■ FT. RICHARDSON, ALASKA. At a Morning Coffee, held on 3 Jan., members of the Women's Club elected the new club officers for 1952.

After a very close vote, it was announced that Mrs. W. Miller had carried the nomination for President; Mrs. J. Jacobson for Vice President; Mrs. J. Mahoney for Recording Secretary; Mrs. Wm. Price for Corresponding Secretary, and Mrs. E. Sanford for Treasurer.

Club members expressed their appreciation to Mrs. G. Wilson, wife of the Post Commander; Mrs. J. Cunningham, wife of Major General Cunningham, and to former officers of the Women's Club for their efforts in organizing the club and guiding it through its initial first year.

■ MONTEREY, CALIF. Lt. Charles Hollis Sarver recently reported for duty as Recreation and Special Services Officer for the U. S. Naval Postgraduate School. He relieved Lt. Comdr. Charles L. Schooler, who has been ordered to temporary duty in San Francisco in connection with the reactivation of the USS Intrepid (CV11).

Boston Area Forms Armed Forces Women's Club

The Armed Forces Women's Club, projecting a new idea, is meeting with enthusiastic support in the Boston area.

Organized to bring together the interested women of all branches of the service, it includes all Regular, Reserve and National Guard units, and the Public Health. Sponsors are the wives of the senior officers of the various branches—Mrs. Gardiner Helmick (Army), Mrs. Hewlett Thebaud (Navy), Mrs. Harold Bradbury (Coast Guard), Mrs. James Phillips (Air Force), Mrs. Paul Sherman (Marine), Mrs. Edward Sirois (Yankee Division), Mrs. Ralph Palladino (94th Reserve Division).

Six hundred attended the recent evening program, at which Mr. Cedric Foster of the Yankee Network spoke. Music was furnished by the Paul Revere Bell Ringers, and the Fort Devens Band, formerly with the Yankee Division.

In addition to five scheduled programs for the year, the Club adopted three projects—the giving of blood for the Armed Forces, the shipment of 150 packages to front-line chaplains to be distributed to army men at the front who did not receive Christmas mail, and the collection of clothes for the South Koreans.

Due chiefly to the vision and energy of Mrs. Robert Dean of the 94th Reserve Division, Mrs. Harold Bradbury of the Coast Guard, and Mrs. John C. Smith of Army, the amount of clothing collected totaled 40 tons, including more than a hundred fur coats. The garments were shipped to New York by truck and by the converted mine-planter, the "Abbott."

Many officers of the units involved have expressed appreciation of the comradeship resulting and the opportunity offered for working together by the comprehensive program of the new club.

C.&G.S. Captains Retire

Capt. Jack Senior completed more than 37 years of service during which time he served in various field and office capacities. He was born in Germany on 23 December 1891 and received his formal education at Cornell University. The major survey ships Explorer and Pathfinder were constructed under his direction. Capt. John A. Bond had more than 34 years service in the Bureau at the time of his retirement. He had served as Assistant to the Director of the Coast and Geodetic Survey during the past six years. Born in Washington, D. C., on 12 Aug. 1896, Captain Bond received his formal education at the Catholic University of America, graduating with a degree in civil engineering. Extend Social Security

A bill to liberalize Social Security legislation, including its extension to those in the Armed Services, is being drafted for introduction in Congress by Senators Lehman and Murray and Representatives Dingell and Roosevelt.

Under existing law, social security credit is given only to persons who served in the Armed Forces between 16 Sept. 1940 and 24 July 1947, while the proposed bill would extend it to present members of the Services.

Rotor De-Icing System

Development of the first successful de-icing system for helicopter rotor blades was announced by the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics this week.

Working under a Navy contract, Bell Aircraft Corp., Buffalo, N. Y., developed and proved the system under the extreme natural icing conditions on the summit of Mt. Washington, N. H. The system is operated electrically and consists principally of rubber "boots" (wire embedded in neo-prene) running the entire length of the main rotor blades and covering about one-third of the surface. The de-icing boots were supplied by the B. F. Goodrich Co., of Akron, Ohio. The boots and other equipment were installed on the helicopter at Bell's plant in Buffalo.

The machine was flown to Mt. Washington by Richard E. Buyers, Bell test pilot, who operated the helicopter during its New Hampshire tests. He reported the installation of the de-icing boots caused no adverse effects on the normal flight characteristics of the helicopter.

Two of the men associated with the development and testing of the system presented a joint paper on rotor de-icing at the Great Lakes Regional Meeting of the American Helicopter Society in Buffalo today. They are Lt. Cdr. L. Carson Houser of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics, and Robert R. Lynn, of Bell's Helicopter Flight Test Engineering Department.

Medical-Industry Liaison

The Armed Forces Medical Policy Council is exploring the best means of effecting liaison between industry and the military on medical problems, with particular reference to their respective research programs.

The Chairman of the Armed Forces Medical Policy Council and the Surgeons General of the Army, Navy and Air Force late last year discussed this matter with the Medical-Surgical Advisory Committee of the National Security Industrial Association. It was agreed that the creation of a central military liaison group, through which both industry and the medical services could funnel information and requests for assistance, would be of material benefit. The manner in which this is to be done is now under study by the Council.

Consolidate Signal Agencies

The Army Signal Corps has announced that its Procurement Agency and Stock Control Agency have been consolidated, 1 Jan., with the combined agency located at the Signal Corps Building, 225 South 18th Street, Philadelphia, Pa. The Procurement Agency has been at that location for some time; the Stock Control Agency has been at 2800 South 20th St. in Philadelphia. The consolidation will be known as The Signal Corps Supply Agency.

Col. W. Preston Corderman, who was Commanding Officer of the Procurement Agency, will command the new agency. The Deputy Commander will be Col. Glenn S. Meader, who was Commanding Officer of the Stock Control Agency.

The Supply Agency will take over both the procurement and stock control functions of Signal Corps.

The consolidation is being made in the interest of economy of personnel and efficiency of operation, which are expected to result from centralization of operations and responsibility. This is in accordance with the Department of the Army's economy policies.

Besides the office in Philadelphia, the Supply Agency will have field offices at New York, Chicago, and Los Angeles; a Laboratory Office at Fort Monmouth, N. J., and a Photographic Office at Long Island City, N. Y. All of these have been under the control of the Procurement Agency.
